INTRODUCTORY & WRAP-UP ACTIVITIES FOR THE 1938PROJEKT LESSON SET

The 1938Projekt timeline creates an opportunity for students to examine the impact historical events had on real people from the past. Each date on the timeline highlights one historical artifact that communicates information about the person who created or used it in 1938. By reading these artifacts closely people who lived in the past come to feel more immediate and real, and history becomes more relevant to our lives now. By selecting several artifacts from the timeline to examine, students come to understand how the many subjective accounts of individual lives we study form a larger, objective truth about a time and place.

One way to begin a study of the 1938Projekt is to build students’ historical literacy. The following activities are meant to introduce the themes and resources found on the site through asking students to practice the skills that historians use to learn from primary source materials.

These activities provide a variety of options for students and teachers. You can choose to examine one artifact at a time, or provide students with artifact sets of the same type of different types on similar themes. You can use the Observation/Inference handout for any of the site’s documents, or ask pairs of students to examine two or three sources using the Source Analysis Sheet. Once students become familiar with reading historical sources they can better use them to draw evidence-based interpretations.

Additionally, for a tailor-made lesson introduction you can use the What do you notice? slideshow and accompanying “See, Think, Question” sheets for a more curated introduction.

You can also use the Word Map to introduce any of the Key Terms found in these materials.

Finally, once students have worked with any of the lesson plans in the 1938Projekt lesson set, they can apply the “Quote Annotation: Frances Harper” activity to make connections from 1938 to the present.

TIPS FOR USING THIS RESOURCE

The following activities ask students to interact with primary sources from the 1938Projekt site. You might wish to print out copies of these sources for students to examine, or ask students to interact with the site itself using laptops or tablets.

Before introducing these materials, take some time to familiarize yourself with the site’s layout.

To begin:

1. Explore the 1938Projekt website by scrolling through daily entries within each month to gain a chronological understanding of the events revealed through artifacts on the site.
2. Follow the hyperlinked dates in the list of artifacts included in this lesson. This will lead you to more in-depth information about the artifacts themselves and the people who created them.
3. Keyword search on the 1938Projekt website to find artifacts or themes that connect to particular topics, places, and individuals.
The documents on the 1938Projekt website consist of official records, reports, letters, diary entries, and photographs. When working with historical sources it is important to keep the following questions in mind:

- Who created this source?
- What do we know about them and the time period when they lived?
- What is the tone of this source?
- What is the point of view?

Try This!

Click on any of the examples from the 1938Projekt below to introduce how to do a close reading of various sources. You can use one example of each source, several examples of the same source, or multiple examples on similar themes. Students can work as a whole class, individually, in pairs, or small groups to examine them. Choose from any of the handouts that follow for students to work with the sources.

Historian’s Toolbox Worksheet:
QUOTE ANNOTATION

BACKGROUND

Frances Ellen Watkins Harper was a 19th Century African American abolitionist, suffragist, poet, teacher, public speaker, writer, and one of the first African American women to be published in the United States. In this quote Harper is referencing slavery in the United States.

Let’s examine this Frances Harper quote:

“But two things are wanting in American civilization – a keener and deeper, broader and tender sense of justice – a sense of humanity, which shall crystallize into the life of a nation the sentiment that justice, simple justice, is the right, not simply of the strong and powerful, but of the weakest and feeblest of all God’s children.”
Frances Harper

ANALYSIS

How can the meaning and language of this quote be extended to the plight of German and Austrian Jewish refugees in 1938?

DISCUSSION

Compare responses in small groups. Jot down new ideas.

EVALUATION

Write a more complete response using evidence from the quote and perspectives of other students.
